

SUMMER INSTITUTE 2011

Johns Hopkins Center for American Indian Health

The Johns Hopkins Center for American Indian Health is offering two week-long institute courses during Summer Institute 2011. Details about the courses are listed below. Students are welcome to attend and encouraged to seek outside funding to attend. A very limited number of scholarships, which include tuition, airfare and hotel accommodation, will be awarded to qualified individuals to participate in this institute.

Course offering and tuition costs: $892.00 (per credit) and $660.00 (per non-credit)

Collecting, Analyzing, and Using Public Health Data in American Indian Communities (221.670)

June 27 – July 1, 2011, 8:00 AM - 3:00 PM, (3 credits)

Course Tuition: $2,676.00 (credit) and $1,980.00 (non-credit)

Introduction to American Indian Health Research Ethics (221.666)

July 18 – 22, 2011, (2 credits), 9:00 AM – 12:15 PM

Course Tuition: $1,784.00 (credit) and $1,320.00 (non-credit)

Course details:

- Courses may be taken for credit (bachelor's degree required) or non credit (60 credits toward a bachelor's degree AND 2 years of health related work experience required). Note: if applying for a scholarship, you MUST take the course for academic credit
- Target audience for the course:
 - Tribal and Indigenous health leaders;
 - Professionals and paraprofessionals serving Tribal and Indigenous communities or similar populations; and
 - Potential graduate students interested in public health.

Scholarship application and deadline:

- Application deadline for scholarship support:
May 2, 2011 at 5 PM EDT
- Application: <http://www.jhsph.edu/caih/programs/training.html>
- For more information, contact: Danielle Tsingine (dtsingin@jhsph.edu) or Nicole Pare (npare@jhsph.edu) or call the Center for American Indian Health at 410-955-6931.

